Park vesterday afternoon. The contests were well played. Both were featured by spectacular plays.

The field was wet and soggy. In the opening contest the Innisfalia outplayed the Minstrels, although the work of the listter's full backs, Cook and Jameson, and Goalkeeper Frost was good, and they held down the score considerably.

The finisfalia' forward line worked well together, and continually dribbled the ball to the mouth of the Minstrels' goal. But for the work of the three defensive players the ball would have been shot oftener than it was.

BELLEVILLE.

Gambling Charges and Counter-Charges May Lead to Reconvening of Body for St. Clair County.

It was declared on good authority in Belleville yesterday that the St. Clair County Grand Jury, which adjourned Fricay evening, and which criticised county officials, but did not mention names, was in all like thood be recailed.

Should this be done it is said that the line of investigation will be inflerent from that taken hitherto, and that indictments will undoubtedly be returned in cases in which the Grand Jury was handleapped, according to statements, by the lace of evidence, and what the jurous term the co-operation of officials, whom they looked to for assistance.

The Grand Jury is a part of the court of St. Clair County, and, in the event that it is recalled, the step must be made by Circuit Judge R. D. W. Holder of Beleville. Judge Holder will probably be communicated with to-day with reference to this matter.

municated with to-day with reference to this matter.

That there was friction between the last Grand Jury, State's Attorney Tecklenburg and Sheriff Thompson is not denied by members of the jury. The Grand Jury charged that Sheriff Thompson did not use his utnost endeavors to serve subpoenas on witnesses, while the Sheriff declared that he worked his men night and day to find these persons. The Grand Jury also declared that there was a leak somewhere by which much wanted witnesses found it convenient to get out of St. Clair County and thus evade service of subpoenar.

The friction between State's Attorney The friction between State's Attorney Tecklenburg and the Grand Jury, it is said, was caused by the voting of indictments when the Grand Jury did not have what the State's Attorney deemed a sufficient amount of evidence to bring about a conviction.

what the State's Attorney dreame a suncient amount of evidence to bring about a conviction.

The general criticism of the Grand Jury caused by the fact that only two gambling indetments were returned, and the special criticism of the Grand Jury by the Board of Supervisors at the meeting of the latter body, Saturday, has thoroughly aroused members of the Grand Jury, who declare that the body as a whole has been maligned.

One of the members, who took a prominen, part in the investigations, declared yesteriay that the Roard of Supervisors had not in any way answered the report of the Grand Jury, and that the jury members were ready and willing to stand by every word of their report.

It was stated by another member of the jury that several were in favor of signing a petition to Circuit Judge Holder, asking that the body be recalled.

CLAIM MEN ARRESTED WERE PLAYING POKER.

For the first time in several years, an alleged poker game at which white men are said to have been engaged in handling the pasteboards, was raided in East St. Louis at midnight yesterday. Twelve alleged players were arrested and all but one were released on bond. Their cases will be set this morning.

The raid was on rooms connected with the saloon of E. Roberts, at Pennsylvania and Collinaville avenues, and was conducted by a detail of East St Louis detectives, headed by Detective James Neville, the veteran of the gambling squad.

Neville, the veteran of the gamoing sound.

The men arrested gave their names as Thomas Kirkpatrick, William Burroughs. O. Limming O. Houks, Charles Dubois. James Roberts, Harry Maher, William Mullen, J. W. Pitis, Roos Webb, Peter Summers and Lou Wakefield.

All but Wakefield were released on hond. Wakefield had but 5 cents in his clothes. He said that he was a stranger in town and, hearing that a poker game was going on at the Roberts saloon, he says he went there simply to look on and keep out of the inclement weather.

PAID GAMBLING FINE

That no indictment was returned against Jacob Schneider, who once was keeper of a poker game in East St. Louis, was explained by the fact that Schneider had pleaded guilty to a charge of gambling in the County Court at Belleville, and had been fined $100 and costs, which he promptly paid. Schneider, with several others, had been subpoenaed before the Grand Jury.

had been subposensed before the Grand Jury.

Schneider did not want the Grand Jury to return an indictment against him, and in order to avoid as much publicity as possible he called at the office of State's Attorney Tecklenburg and stated that he wanted to plead guilty to a charge of violating the gambling laws. The charge was made against Schneider, he pleaded guilty and was fined, and the result of the proceeding was laid before the Grand Jury. No indictment was accordingly voted against Schneider.
